

Holcombe Mill

Holcombe Mill is a Grade 2 listed structure on an industrial estate in the Nailsworth valley, near Stroud. Working in collaboration with the local conservation officer, the Mill has been rescued from near dereliction and is being converted into flexible serviced office space for one or more occupiers.

The new architectural interventions including an entrance canopy, metal staircase and services are designed to be of high quality and sympathetic to the industrial context and origins of the mill building, yet remain clearly legible as modern. Natural ventilation, and high levels of natural daylighting combined with the historic features of the original building will provide a pleasant working environment for the future tenants.

Location: Nailsworth, Stroud

Client: Spring Mill Holdings

Contractor: Stone DCI

Status: Completed 2011

Holcombe Mill - Completed

Opposite : Completed front elevation.

This page clockwise l-r : New oxidised steel canopy wraps up and over the front door provides shelter and rest to workers and visitors; New elements read clearly as separate elements to the old building; Works on building.

